

Childhood Trauma Exists

To understand a child's anxieties, look through their eyes.

Infant, teen, toddler, tween... any child.

Sometimes things happen to children that impact them in ways you'd never imagine. Angry arguments, yelling and hitting could be traumatic to a child. To understand their anxieties, look at each situation through the child's eyes. If you see signs of childhood trauma—withdrawal, clinging, anger, indifference, fear—you can do something.

There is help, and there is hope. Learn more at

LOOK THROUGH THEIR EYES.ORG

 illinois childhood trauma coalition bright promises FOUNDATION give kids a chance

AD SPONSORED BY Chicago Tribune