ICTC Monthly

February 2017

Greetings ICTC members,

Thank you for turning out in record numbers to our last quarterly meeting! Your support for the ICTC mission was evident, and we appreciate your participation and the thoughtful questions you posed during the Q&A session. Following the meeting we emailed out a brief survey for attendees to share their feedback with us. If you haven't had an opportunity to fill it out yet, please CLICK HERE. We value your opinions and would like to provide feedback to the filmmakers for the PBS release of Newtown: What Remains After All is Lost on April 3rd, 2017. We are also exploring how the ICTC can add content to the local and national dialogue of Newtown, and this is an excellent opportunity to lend your voice to that discussion.

As always, if you have important news to share, job openings, funding opportunities, or relevant information related to childhood trauma, we want to hear from you! Please reach out to us at ictc@uriechildrens.org to be included in next month's newsletter.

In the Spotlight

The NCTSN Child Welfare Trauma Training Toolkit course assists those in the field of child welfare who wish to learn more about child welfare and trauma. The backbone of the course is the newly released second edition of the Child Welfare Trauma Training Toolkit which teaches basic knowledge, skills, and values about working with children who have experienced traumatic stress and who are in the child welfare system. The toolkit guides practitioners and others in supporting children's safety, permanency, and well-being through case analysis and corresponding interventions tailored to them and to their biological and resource families. This comprehensive training curriculum is twice the size of the first edition and includes a Trainer's Guide, Appendices, Slidekit, Participant Manual, Supplemental Handouts, recommended reading and resources, Comprehensive Guide, and an accompanying CD-Rom. Visit learn.NCSTN.org for more information.
